

Legends of Roads: Directly Quoted from Section 3, Plat C, dated January 2, 1957

Bifrost Way – from Norse mythology, meaning the rainbow bridge which connects the earth with Asgard, the Citadel of the Gods, gleaming with gold and silver palaces, situated at the zenith.

Worlds End Highway – when Governor Spotswood and his knights of the golden horseshoe first viewed the Shenandoah Valley from atop the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia, he exclaimed, “Worlds End”.

Ulysses Way – from Greek mythology, Ulysses being the hero of a lifetime odyssey of braving the torments of the damned to once again be at the side of his beloved Penelope.

Khyber Pass – pass thro the mountains of Asia thro which the Mongol hordes of the eastern conqueror’s, Ghengis Khan and Kubla Khan, came to conquer all of India and the then known entire world.

Apollo’s Pass – in Greek mythology the god Apollo dwelled at the crest of Mt. Olympus and those favored by the gods were brought to him to be given immortality there.

Inca Road – engineering wonder of the world dating back to 1300 that marched across the top of the Andes beginning in Equador and ending ten thousand away in Chile over which the Incas maintained the fastest communications system in the world of that day.

Jericho Road – the greatest road of all history over which some of the greatest figures of the bible traversed, including Christ himself, who passed that way to his triumphal entry into Jerusalem.

Cheops’ Road – magnificent road, paved 10 feet thick with stone blocks, that Egyptian King Cheops built across desert to the great pyramid employing 100,000 men for ten years, which is the oldest authentic paved road in history.

Wilderness Road – perhaps the most desperately gained and hard-fought-for road in history of America, blazed thro the mountains over the “Warrior’s Path”, by Daniel Boone, it opened the way for seventy thousand settlers to follow.